Journal Week 6

I was successful in getting people to contribute this week. I will be following up though. People seem hesitant to contribute because they are busy, or afraid of trying something new. My brother will be the hardest, but I asked him to contribute to the law enforcement archives. He did agree to do it but he is a big fat baby and will need me to hold his hand through the entire process.

I am way over my hours this week. The oral histories took a lot of time to transcribe for me. Something I did learn though was if I play it on full blast in the slowest playback speed, I can do it. I had my husband check my work for me. I can't hear low frequency sounds. My grandma and my dad have voices I can hear though. I think I got everything alright. I also have someone lined up for the larger oral history. I need to get my questions together. Because of the topic I want to get her approval for the questions before the interview.
