Rollercoaster Fun

This week I read an article about if it's safe to go to an amusement park. First of all, you have to follow the CDC Guidelines to even get into the amusement park. A lot of critics and professionals advise that if the amusement park is outside you can go, but if it is inside they don't really suggest going. Dr. Leana Wen states, "If the amusement park is entirely outdoors and you're going at a time when it's not a bunch of people packed into a very small space, if you can keep some pretty good physical distancing...". You still have to wear a mask outdoors, and you might have to get a negative Covid test. Also, you should email or call the amusement park to get tickets so you don't have to do it there. If you want to buy items or food, you should always keep a little bottle of hand sanitizer with you. You should also bring more than one mask, just in case your mask gets damaged. Outdoor dining is the best way to get food during Covid-19 at an amusement park. Also, you could bring your own food, which is also a great way to eat at an amusement park. Even if you're on a rollercoaster you could be spreading Covid-19. Regina Davis Moss states, "When you're on rides, a lot of times you're screaming, these are also potential opportunities for droplet spread." This article was very interesting, and I hope I will be able to go to an amusement park soon!
