

America First

Now that the U.S. has the most cases in the global coronavirus pandemic, Ginger Chicken secured all N95 masks from her garage.

In response to her local hospital's call for help, she went to donate.

Capital Health makes appeal for donations of personal protective equipment
March 24, 2020

Capital Health Medical Center — Hopewell is asking the community to help out during the Covid-19 crisis with donations of personal protective equipment, or PPE. The hospital reports being in need of the following items: N95 protective face masks, full-face plastic shields, plastic goggles and alcohol-based hand sanitizer (at least 60% isopropyl alcohol). Anyone who is able to help should call (609) 394-6090.

Then, she heard about this Forbes report on MSNBC's Rachel Maddow Show:

"By the end of the day, roughly 280 million masks from warehouses around the U.S. had been purchased by foreign buyers and were earmarked to leave the country, according to the broker — and that was in one day."[3/30/2020]

And she lost her bearings...
