

CALL FOR SUBMISSIONS
May 29, 2020

Lyn Ribisi

You are invited to contribute to the archive Journal of the Plague Year, a crowd-sourced collection of thoughts, artwork, poetry, oral histories, journals, tweets, stories, photographs, and memes—anything that records or reflections on this unique time in history during the Coronavirus pandemic. I'm asking for contributions of humor since laughing is an important way to cope with difficult times, but please feel free to submit anything at all whether ordinary or spectacular. Some examples of humorous submissions might be tales from your homeschooling, from your remote work-at-home situation, about the virus itself, and how home life and your day-to-day activities have changed. What you have experienced and what you have to say matter very much and belong in the archive for future generations to understand our time.

Submitting is simple and you can upload .jpeg, .mp4, .pdf, and .mp3 files. Just go to this link <https://covid-19archive.org/s/archive/page/Share>. You will see “Share Your Story” and a form which should be self-explanatory. If you have any questions or need any help, feel free to contact me at Lynribisi@gmail.com. In the Description field, please use the hashtag #humor if you are submitting funny content.

Thank you for your submission!
