

Journal 2:

So far... today has been better than all of last week. Finally, for the first time in weeks ALDI and Lidl had the items in stock that their ad (which I check religiously each week in hopes of junk I don't need to spend my money on, but inevitably will) listed. This has been my second week back at work full time....the time off spoiled me. I crash by 1:00PM and long for a nap, but the screech of the office phone abruptly snaps me out of my daze. Yes....it is exactly what I feared.....another bride calling to postpone her wedding. Now, it isn't why you think! We aren't under mandates anymore, we are a private venue so may operate as we please, and no she isn't afraid of COVID-19. However, COVID-19 did play a factor in her cancelation....we joked that it would happen....we never dreamed it would happen s rampantly.... she's ... PREGNANT. My co-worker and I had a thirty minute long conversation about how all that time at home during quarantine was going to usher us into the next baby boom! That's all for today.