Change

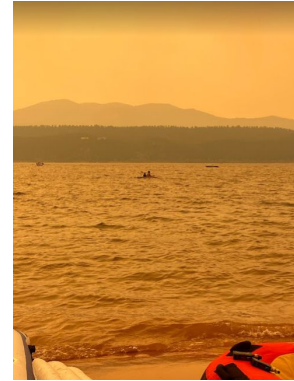

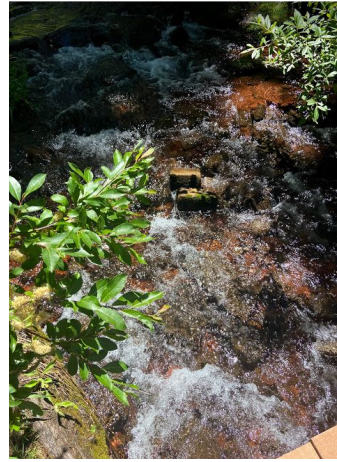

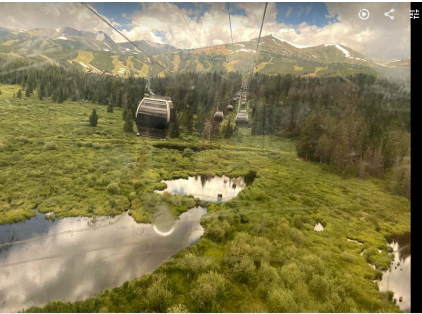

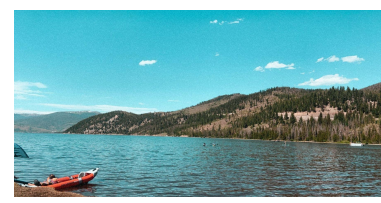

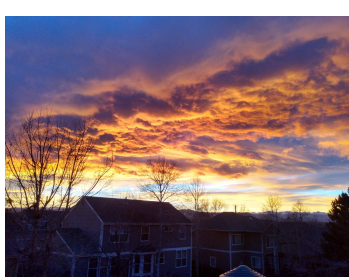

I cried so hard... so hard when the protests were going on. It hurt so much to see and it was truly scary.

What a year...

I look back on my life before and after COVID-19 and I am astounded at how different everything was and is now. This world has been full of change, hurt, hope, love, injustice, hate, sickness, health, and so much more. I have changed so much from March 2020 to now. I am a completely different person from the person in those photos. I definitely miss the times before masks, sickness, and riots, however, it has shaped me into the person that I am today. I was able to take a step back from the pressures of school to focus on what I really thought was important. I am sad about all that we have lost, but, I am also thankful for everything that has been brought to us. The world is stronger than ever, even if it is divided. Many found themselves, many helped fight injustice, many found their voice, many stepped out of their comfort zone to truly live. It has been an amazing journey and I hope the future generations look back on this period of time in a positive light. It was hard, but we have persevered and we have made it through. <3
